Letter from the Chair and Executive Director

Since our founding in 1967, DCGT has supported tens of thousands of people through some of the most difficult moments of their lives. At the heart of this work are our volunteers—individuals who step forward, time and again, to offer compassion, presence, and hope when it is needed most. They give the very best of themselves so that someone else might find their way to a better place, even if only for a moment.

This is humanity at its finest. And it remains the foundation of everything we do.

As we approach our 60th year, we are reflecting on our vision: to be a leader in providing resilience and hope through innovative crisis and mental health support. Leadership, for us, is not a static achievement—it is an ongoing commitment to challenge ourselves, to question our assumptions, and to continuously improve. We are all stewards of DCGT, with a shared responsibility to strengthen our impact in meaningful, measurable ways. That means staying curious, being self-reflective, and always striving to serve more people, more effectively.

In 2025, we were honoured to be recognized as one of Canada's Top 100 Charities—the only crisis centre included. This distinction reflects not only our operational integrity and transparency, but also the confidence that donors and partners place in our work and our future.

Our focus on continuous improvement is translating into real impact. Over the past year, we achieved a 48% increase in calls answered on our 408 helpline, a 7% increase in calls answered through the 988 National Suicide Crisis Helpline, and a 13% increase in fund development revenue. In fact, 2025 marked the most successful fundraising year in our history—a powerful vote of confidence in our mission and momentum.

This year was also marked by profound loss. In December, we said goodbye to a dear friend and colleague, Alex Shendelman, Manager of our Survivor Support Program. Over his 20 years with DCGT, Alex touched thousands of lives. He was a world-class listener—patient, non-judgmental, and deeply present. For Alex, the person in front of him was always the centre of his universe. He embodied the very essence of DCGT and helped build a survivor support model that will continue to guide us for years to come.

In 2026, we will honour Alex's legacy by revitalizing the Survivor Support Program, incorporating his insights and vision into its future. We are also launching a new inbound quality program to strengthen and measure the impact of every interaction, and we will continue to deepen our engagement with volunteers through recognition and community-building efforts.

To our volunteers, staff, and Board members: thank you. Your dedication improves the lives of thousands in our community every day. We are on a shared journey to expand our impact. Like any meaningful journey, progress is not always linear—but with each step, we move forward.

To our donors and funders: your generosity makes this work possible. We are deeply grateful for your trust and remain committed to earning it every day through accountability, transparency, and results.

Sincerely,

Mark Sklar, Chair

Robert Ridge, Executive Director

A Message of Impact

In 2025, the Distress Centres of Greater Toronto (DCGT) experienced one of the most impactful years in our history. Through innovation, operational improvements, and an unwavering commitment to community care, we strengthened our ability to meet growing demand – ensuring more individuals in crisis had someone to turn to.

Every call answered, every volunteer trained, and every system improved represents a life touched. This report reflects not only what we achieved, but how we are building a stronger, more sustainable future for mental health and suicide prevention.

Impact at a Glance

54%

increase in Toronto Distress Line activity compared to 2024

374 volunteers trained to support individuals in crisis

39%

experienced reduced loneliness and isolation

97%

of callers reported appreciating the support received

71%

of callers are calmer or content at the end of their call

26%

reported decreased distress or anxiety

These numbers represent more than data. They reflect real people finding relief, connection, and hope.

Meeting the Moment

Service Delivery & Reach

DCGT's crisis and distress services continued to play a vital role across the Greater Toronto Area, offering 24/7, barrier-free emotional support to individuals facing:

 Loneliness and social isolation

 Anxiety and depression

 Interpersonal challenges

 Crisis and suicidal ideation

Our services are grounded in compassionate listening, trauma-informed care, and early intervention, ensuring individuals receive support before situations escalate.

What People Are Calling About

Top Concerns Identified

Interpersonal issues: 47%

Mental health: 27%

Physical health: 10%

Abuse/violence: 6%

Suicide-related: 4%

This highlights a critical truth: most people reach out before crisis – and that early support is lifesaving.

A Human Impact

The Power of One Conversation

*See, even now, after talking for so long, I wanna thank you.
You saved me... my kids need me.*

Moments like this define our work. A single conversation can shift perspective, restore hope, and save a life.

Strengthening Our Foundation

The Power of One Conversation

Volunteers are the heart of DCGT.

In 2025, we made significant investments to improve how we train, support, and retain them, ensuring they are equipped to provide high-quality care.

Key Advancements

- Redesigned training program with asynchronous learning modules
 - Enhanced live sessions to focus on practical skills and real-world scenarios
 - Introduced Volunteer Info Sessions to improve candidate readiness
 - Reduced staff delivery time by 50%, increasing efficiency
 - Trained 374 volunteers, expanding our capacity
- These changes created a smoother, more supportive learning journey while allowing staff to focus on mentorship and skill development.

Enhancing the Volunteer Experience

Through research and engagement, we identified key areas volunteers value most:

Connection with peers

Clear understanding of impact and programs

Consistent, actionable feedback

Meaningful recognition

What We Did

Increased volunteer engagement events (in-person & virtual)

Strengthened community through social and skill-building opportunities

Launched initiatives to improve feedback and coaching systems

Began development of a new Quality Assurance (QA) program

Looking Ahead

Our upcoming QA program will provide:

- Structured feedback and coaching
- Data-driven performance insights
- Consistent skill development pathways

This ensures volunteers feel confident, supported, and continuously improving.

Operational Excellence & Innovation

2025 marked a major step forward in modernizing our systems and operations.

Technology & Systems

- Implemented Genesys Cloud to enhance service delivery
- Optimized Better Impact volunteer platform
- Redesigned call reporting systems for clearer insights and consistency

Impact of These Changes

- Reduced administrative burden
- Improved service quality and consistency
- Enhanced data-driven decision-making
- Strengthened volunteer coordination

These improvements allow us to scale sustainably without compromising care.

Survivor Support Program

In 2025, our Survivor Support Program continued to provide a safe, peer-supported space for individuals navigating the profound impact of suicide and homicide loss. Through compassionate, mentored support, participants were able to identify, explore, and begin processing the complex emotions that follow sudden loss.

Impact at a Glance

1,581

Helping Interactions

412

Unique Program Participants

2,750

Volunteer Hours

This past year marked meaningful growth for the program. We successfully hosted another in-person event for International Survivors of Suicide Loss Day, welcoming over 100 participants who came together in community, remembrance, and healing.

At the heart of this work are the lived experiences that shape and sustain our community:

"In 2007, my 17-year-old daughter took her life. She had been struggling emotionally. I too had suffered from depression – this was the tipping point in my life.

When I returned home from the hospital after a two-week stay, I began sessions with two kind and supportive volunteers from the Suicide Support Program (SSP). They made me feel seen, heard, and valued, and helped me rediscover a sense of purpose.

I have since been volunteering with SSP for twelve years. I have gone from surviving to thriving, thanks to those two volunteers who were there for me at the worst time in my life."

Stories like this reflect the lasting impact of peer support – how compassion, connection, and shared understanding can not only help individuals heal, but empower them to give back and support others on their journey.

Through continued growth and community connection, the Suicide Support Program remains a vital part of DCGT's commitment to supporting individuals beyond crisis: offering care, understanding, and a path forward after loss.

Build for the Future

2025 was a year of transformation, but also preparation.

We are now positioned to:

- ♥ Grow volunteer capacity by 34%
- ♥ Expand reach within underserved communities
- ♥ Increase service efficiency and responsiveness
- ♥ Strengthen quality assurance and feedback systems

2026 Focus Areas

Scaling the 408 Distress Line
(projected 26% growth)

Strengthening volunteer engagement and retention

Expanding language-based services

Enhancing service quality
through QA implementation

Our Commitment

At DCGT, we believe:

No one should have to face their darkest moments alone.

Every improvement we make, whether in training, technology, or volunteer experience, is rooted in that belief.

Closing Reflection

The impact of our work cannot always be measured in numbers, but it is felt in every conversation, every moment of relief, and every life changed.

In 2025, we didn't just grow, we strengthened our ability to care.

And because of that, more people were heard.

More people felt supported.

And more people found hope.
